Rising Star Considers What's Worth Fighting for in Stirring Sophomore Novel

- Author's debut received much acclaim, including multiple starred reviews
- "A memorable and moving exploration of prejudice and friendship across ethnic and gender lines."—Library Journal starred review of Things We Didn't Say
- For fans of Lisa Wingate, Lynn Austin, and Susan Meissner
- Features fascinating look at conscientious objectors during WWII

Since the attack on Pearl Harbor, Gordon Hooper and his buddy Jack Armitage have done "work of national importance" in the West as conscientious objectors: volunteering as smokejumpers, and parachuting into and extinguishing raging wildfires. But the number of winter blazes they're called to in early 1945 seems suspiciously high, and when an accident leaves Jack badly injured, Gordon realizes the facts don't add up.

A member of the Women's Army Corps, Dorie Armitage has long been ashamed of her brother's pacificism, but she's shocked by news of his accident. Determined to find out why he was harmed, she arrives at the national forest under the guise of conducting an army report . . . and finds herself forced to work with Gordon. He believes it's wrong to lie; she's willing to do whatever it takes for justice to be done. As they search for clues, Gordon and Dorie must wrestle with their convictions about war and peace and decide what to do with the troubling secrets they discover.

EXCERPT

She hears whimpering. Alarmed, she tells Eva to stay put and follows the sound. Her heart stops when she opens the bathroom door.

Water pools on the yellow linoleum. Owen kneels by the tub, his body hunched over as he forces Rocky's head underwater. Rocky fights wildly, but Owen holds him down. When he sees Adri in the doorway, his face darkens.

"I hate this dog."

Instinctively, Adri slams into him, barely knocking him back, but it gives Rocky just enough time to burst from the water. Owen wraps his hands around her neck.

"Where have you been? Where did you go?"

She tries to wrench his wet fingers from her neck, but her hands slip over his.

"Eva," she says, choking. "Eva will see you."

Suddenly Owen lets go, and Adri gasps for air as he rushes from the bathroom. She tries to follow him, but Rocky blocks the way, determined to protect her.

"Come on, boy," she whispers, her throat still stinging. "Come with me." Adri pulls him with her.

Owen is in the living room with his arm around Eva. His voice is cheerful, but Eva looks afraid as she glances between shaken Adri and soaked Rocky.

"Why is Rocky all wet?"

"I was giving him a bath," Owen says smoothly, ushering her into the kitchen. "Are you hungry? Where did you and Mama go this morning?"

Shaking, Adri waits as Owen makes Eva a grilled cheese. He's dressed in clean clothes, and his sandy hair is slicked back, but there's a fresh cut under his eye—no doubt from a bar fight, his favorite pastime. Adri listens as Eva tells him about the church service. He pretends to be interested, but when he looks at Adri again, his eyes are full of fury.

God, please. Help me.

Acclaimed Author Pens Moving Appalachian Novel

- “Thomas returns with an uplifting novel that strikes all the high points of redemptive love and coming of age . . . offer[ing] a fresh look at the nuances and the importance of emotional intelligence.”—Booklist starred review of The Right Kind of Fool
- Author artfully weaves in fascinating bits of history, exploring the days of water divination and the Hawks Nest Tunnel disaster
- “Fans of historical Southern fiction will be drawn to this title, as will readers of Lisa Wingate.”—Library Journal on When Silence Sings

It's 1932 and Sullivan Harris is on the run. He promised the people of Kline, West Virginia, that he would find them water, but now he's failed and disappeared with their cash. Although he's determined to stay a step ahead of pursuers—like Jeremiah Weber—his resources are running low.

Gainey Floyd is suspicious of Sulley's claim to be a dowser when he appears in town but reconsiders after he finds water. Rather, it's Sulley who grows uneasy when his success makes folks wonder if he can find more than water—like forgotten items or missing people. He lights out to escape such expectations and runs smack into something worse.

Hundreds of men have found jobs digging the Hawks Nest Tunnel—but what they thought was a blessing is killing them. And no one seems to care. Here, Sulley finds something new—a desire to help. As Jeremiah—and now Gainey—pursue him, Sulley becomes the unexpected catalyst for finding what even he has forgotten. Hope.

The action-packed climax had me on the edge. The reveal of the killer came as a complete surprise."—Historical Novels Review on The Bridge to Belle Island

"In her latest captivating inspirational romance, Christy Award-winning Klassen effectively channels the gothic spirit of Austen's Northanger Abbey, Du Maurier's Jamaica Inn, and the classic novels of Holt by making effective use of her atmospheric Cornish setting and creating a plot packed with secrets and intrigue."—Booklist on The Tutor's Daughter

"In this gorgeous story of love and redemption, Klassen spins a tale of secrets and deception, coupled with unexpected plot twists and a swoon-worthy ending; giving readers more evidence as to why she's a fan favorite. Readers of inspirational Regency romances will clamor for this title."—Library Journal starred review of The Painter's Daughter

Another Sure Winner from the Top Name in Inspirational Regency Romance

- Author delivers a sweetly Gothic romance in the vein of Northanger Abbey and Jamaica Inn
- Klassen is a three-time Christy Award winner, Midwest Book Award winner, Minnesota Book Award winner, and winner of a Christian Retailing's Best Award
- Readers will love how the author draws on the grand setting of a converted medieval structure to build atmosphere, similar to Downton Abbey and the popular historic Lacock Abbey

News of her brother's worrisome behavior spurs Miss Rebecca Lane to return home to her village. Upon her arrival, he begs her to go to nearby Swanford Abbey, a medieval monastery turned grand hotel rumored to be haunted. Feeling responsible for her brother's desperate state, she reluctantly agrees to stay at the abbey until she can deliver his manuscript to a fellow guest who might help him get published—an author who once betrayed them.

Soon, Rebecca starts seeing strange things, including a figure in a hooded black gown gliding silently through the abbey's cloisters at night. For all its renovations and veneer of luxury, the ancient foundations seem to echo with whispers of the past—including her own. For there she encounters Sir Frederick—baronet, magistrate, and former neighbor—who long ago broke her heart. Now a handsome widower of thirty-five, he is trying to overcome a past betrayal of his own.

When the famous author is found dead, Sir Frederick makes inquiries and quickly discovers that several people held grudges against the author, including Miss Lane and her brother. As Sir Frederick searches for answers, he is torn between his growing feelings for Rebecca and his pursuit of the truth. For Miss Lane is clearly hiding something. . . .

EXCERPT

As she took her luggage into the room, she knew that 'de rien' meant it's nothing. But was it nothing? Had she just agreed to a date with the innkeeper? And, really, what was wrong with that? He spoke excellent English and had a friend who might be her long lost relative. Perhaps a fifth cousin thrice removed. Who knew? So why not just go with the flow and enjoy the evening? Wasn't that why she'd taken this trip? Or mostly anyway.

As she unpacked her bags, stowing clothes in an antique dresser and armoire, she remembered her real mission. Great-grandmamma Simone's 'treasure.' That was why she was here. But it wasn't as if she could just announce this ridiculous notion to everyone she met. For one thing, they would probably assume she was crazy. Or even worse, they might become suspicious of an outsider trying to sneak in here and steal some family fortune. As if there were such a thing.

She removed the mysterious letter from her bag and read it again. And, although the very same letter had seemed rather bizarre and unbelievable back in California, it suddenly seemed a bit more real here in Arve. Especially in this charmingly old world room with its rough beams and sloped ceiling. It seemed just the sort of room her great-grandmamma might've once occupied.

Simone pushed aside the lace curtains to gaze out the leaded glass window and couldn't help but gasp at the magical twilight outside. The dusky indigo sky had painted the snow-covered rooftops in shades of pale blue, and windows glowed amber as lights inside were turned on. And once again, Simone got the feeling she was someone else . . . somewhere else . . . or perhaps even traveling back in time. But it wasn't frightening. In fact, it was pretty exciting!

All theater romances are tragedies. Ella Blythe knows this. Still, she cannot help but hope her own story may turn out different than most—and certainly different than the tragic story of the Ghost of Craven Street Theater. Yet as she struggles to maintain her tenuous place in the ever-shrinking ballet company, win the attentions of principal dancer Philippe, and avoid company flirt Jack, Ella cannot deny the uncanny feeling that her life is mirroring that of the dead ballerina.

Is she dancing ever closer to the edge of her own tragic end? Or will the secrets that are about to come to light offer release from the past?

Mystery and romance make the perfect dance partners in this evocative story from fan-favorite Joanna Davidson Politano.

- “Kirkpatrick’s stirring biographical novel honors its real-life inspiration and the relevance of her historical journey.”—Booklist on Something Worth Doing
- “Kirkpatrick has a wonderful voice in historical fiction.”—Interviews and Reviews on Something Worth Doing
- Jane Kirkpatrick has won many awards, including the WILLA Award

Classically trained pianist and singer Natalie Curtis isolated herself for five years after a breakdown just before she was to debut with the New York Philharmonic. Guilt-ridden and songless, Natalie can’t seem to recapture the joy music once brought her. In 1902, her brother invites her to join him in the West to search for healing. What she finds are songs she’d never before encountered—the haunting melodies, rhythms, and stories of Native Americans.

But their music is under attack. The US government’s Code of Offenses prohibits American’s indigenous people from singing, dancing, or speaking their own languages as the powers that be insist on assimilation. Natalie makes it her mission not only to document these songs before they disappear but to appeal to President Teddy Roosevelt himself, who is the only man with the power to repeal the unjust law. Will she succeed and step into a new song . . . and a new future?

Award-winning author Jane Kirkpatrick weaves yet another lyrical tale based on a true story that will keep readers captivated to the very end.

"The name's Ben Zook. I've come to see that White-winged Tern that everyone in the bird world is buzzing about. I sure hope it's not a one-day wonder."

Penny's heart gave one huge thump and then started beating wildly.

It was him. Even after two decades, she would know him anywhere.

She'd always known that one day, somehow, somewhere, they'd meet again. And here he was. He was here for a bird.

Of course the Lord would entice him back home with a bird. A rare bird. Just as birds found their way in the sky, so God had found a way to bring Ben Zook here.

Ben walked around the car to greet her, holding out his hand to her. His movement was quick, graceful, and Penny suddenly remembered that was the way of him. He was tall, so tall she had to raise her chin to see his eyes. He was so fine to look at that she couldn't help but stare at the sheer wonder of him. His deep voice made Penny think of a waterfall, fast-moving and fluid, unable to hold on to, yet so mesmerizing.

Ben Zook was standing just a few feet away from her!

Still dumbstruck, she gazed at him, then at his offered hand. Do something, Penny! Pull yourself together. But she couldn't budge, couldn't move a muscle. His eyes registered no recognition of her. Not a flicker. Penny could see she was a complete stranger to him. Eyes couldn't lie.

When too much time had passed, Ben dropped his hand with an awkward smile, then turned away to take things out of the car. He opened the trunk to pull out suitcases, handing one to his cousin. He paused, leaned one hand against the car, swayed a little, and suddenly folded to the ground like a rag doll.

Award-Winning, Bestselling Author with More Than 1.2 Million Copies Sold

- “Fisher’s fans and newcomers to Amish fiction will be overjoyed with this heartwarming tale.”—Publishers Weekly on Two Steps Forward
- Author consistently hits the ECPA bestseller list
- “There’s just something unique and fresh about every Suzanne Woods Fisher book.”—Shelley Shepard Gray, New York Times and USA Today bestselling author

Ben Zook had only two loves in his life: books and birds. In a stroke of good fortune, he’d stumbled onto a way to cobble together those two loves into a career, writing books about rare birds. He was as free as a bird—until a chase for a rare White-winged Tern takes him to the one place on earth he planned to never return: his Amish home in Stoney Ridge.

Desperate for photographs of the elusive tern, Ben hires a local field guide, Micah Weaver, and boards at Micah’s farm, planning to “bag the bird” and leave Stoney Ridge before anyone recognizes him. But he neglected to plan for Micah’s sister, Penny. One long-ago summer, Penny had introduced Ben to birding, even sharing with him a hidden eagle aerie. That eagle became his spark bird—the one that inspired his lifelong love.

Ben. He was Penny’s spark bird. That was when she knew true love. She’d always hoped Ben would come back to Stoney Ridge. Back to his Amish roots. Back to her. The only problem? Ben has absolutely no memory of Penny.

Bestselling author Suzanne Woods Fisher welcomes her readers to the Amish community at Stoney Ridge in this engaging story of discovering just who the rare birds are in life.

What in the world . . . ?!

From her slouched position in a seat near the back of the classroom, Cate blinked as the tall, dark-haired man who'd once been the center of her universe entered and strode to the desk in front.

Zeke Sloan was the Spanish teacher at Ivy Hill Academy?

No.

Impossible.

Teresa Medina taught Spanish here—and Zeke's name was nowhere in the dossier of school personnel the department had prepared for her.

Heart banging against her rib cage, Cate sank lower in her seat.

What was going on?

In light of the murmur that rippled through the students as Zeke faced them, she wasn't the only one surprised by his presence.

"Good morning, ladies." He gave the room a commanding sweep and displayed one of those half-hitch smiles that used to turn her to mush. "As you can see, I'm not Ms. Medina. Complications from the injuries she suffered in her car accident have delayed her return. I'm Zeke Martinez, her temporary replacement."

As he finished the explanation and introduced himself with an unfamiliar surname, his gaze lingered on hers. There was no flicker of recognition or acknowledgment in his eyes.

But he knew who she was, despite the blood red streak she'd added to her hair and the dark eye makeup that wasn't part of her usual beauty routine. You didn't give a man your heart without learning to read his every nuance.

Yet he wasn't surprised by her presence.

Why not?

Who had tipped him off she was here?

Why was he using a fake name?

What had caused the barely detectable limp in his authoritative gait?

Was he at Ivy Hill on an undercover assignment for the DEA job that had sabotaged their relationship?

If so, how much did he know about her case?

As questions raced through her mind, she dipped her chin and fiddled with the cap on her pen. She had to calm down. Play this cool. Zeke obviously didn't intend to expose her. She owed him the same courtesy.

At least until she had a handle on what was going on.

BAKER PUBLISHING GROUP has been a member of the Green Press Initiative since 2005. We are proud to be industry leaders, printing 40% of our new books on recycled paper. The first Evangelical publisher to take part in the Green Press Initiative, Baker Publishing Group urges other Christian publishers to take seriously God's mandate to be good stewards of the earth and to join this worthy initiative to spare our forests as we spread the Christian message through our books.
