Acclaimed Author Offers Wonderful Blend of Intrigue, Romance, and History

- White’s look inside Room 40 gives a glimpse into the deadly world of WWI spies and the heroes who fought to stop them
- A man without a future meets a woman who can’t imagine tomorrow without him
- “White proves again that she is a master.”—Booklist on An Hour Unspent

All of England thinks Phillip Camden a monster—a man who deliberately caused the deaths of his squadron. But as nurse Arabelle Denler watches the so-dubbed “Black Heart” every day, she sees something far different: a hurting man desperate for mercy. And when their paths twist together and he declares himself her new protector, she realizes she has her own role to play in his healing.

Phillip Camden would have preferred to die that day with his squadron rather than be recruited to the Admiralty’s codebreaking division. The threats he receives daily are no great surprise and, in his opinion, well deserved. What comes as a shock is the reborn desire to truly live that Arabelle inspires in him.

But when an old acquaintance shows up and seems set on using him in a plot that has the codebreakers of Room 40 in a frenzy, new affections are put to the test.

Dramatic Finale to Bergren's Colonial-Era Series

- “The meticulously realized island setting is . . . a gem that Bergren polishes to a shine.”—Historical Novels Review on Keturah
- Caribbean setting in the midst of the Revolutionary War provides a fascinating, high-stakes backdrop
- Readers will enjoy the continuing story of the Banning sisters and seeing the youngest find her match

Selah Banning has come of age on the West Indies island of Nevis, shaped by experiences far beyond the typical upbringing of a young British lady in 1777. She never anticipated that the most tumultuous time of her life might await her in the year ahead. . . .

Jedediah Reed, a young Methodist preacher with a call to serve the slaves of Nevis, has settled at Selah's family's plantation, the Double T. As Selah's heart is drawn to the same people, their shared purpose brings them together—despite her guardians' concern with a romance that promises little security for the future.

As Jedediah's faith and Selah's abolitionist leanings lead to changes on the plantation, the Revolutionary War continues to build in the States. With the threat of starvation and the conflict with island mogul Angus Shubert growing ever stronger, the future of the Double T and its people hangs in the balance.

Lauren Bailey may be a romantic at heart, but after a decade of match-making schemes gone wrong, there’s only one match she’s committed to now—the one that will make her a mother. Lauren is a dedicated first grade teacher in Idaho, and her love for children has led her to the path of international adoption. To satisfy her adoption agency’s requirements, she gladly agreed to remain single for the foreseeable future; however, just as her long wait comes to an end, Lauren is blindsided by a complication she never saw coming: Joshua Avery.

Joshua may be a substitute teacher by day, but Lauren finds his passion for creating educational technology as fascinating as his antics in the classroom. Though she does her best to downplay the undeniable connection between them, his relentless pursuit of her heart puts her commitment to stay unattached to the test and causes her once-firm conviction to waver.

With an impossible decision looming, Lauren might very well find herself choosing between the two deepest desires of her heart . . . even if saying yes to one means letting go of the other.

EXCERPT

Brooke coughed, gagged. Pain sizzled across her shoulders and back. Smoke and fire billowed through the restaurant.

Flames leapt from her sleeve.

Panic flaring, she scrambled out from under the heavy weight of the body that had slammed into her, and threw herself backward. She rolled, beating her body and arms against the tiled floor.

Screams from wounded patrons and workers registered. She wanted to add her own to the chaos, but she needed to breathe. Except all the oxygen had been sucked from the area.

Brooke wrapped the edge of the hijab around the lower part of her face, mouth, and nose, ignoring the razor-sharp pain racing through her arms, her back, her shoulders.

A hard hand clasped hers. She looked down and gasped. Specialist Isaiah Michaels lay next to her, and with a sob, she realized he'd been the one to throw himself over her, covering her, protecting her. "Hold on, Michaels, hold on."

A good portion of the left side of his face was gone, from the left cheek up to his hairline. Her stomach lurched, but he was trying to tell her something. She scuttled closer, clutching his trembling fingers. "Shh . . . don't try to talk," she croaked. "I'll get you some help. I'm so sorry. So sorry." It was her fault. Guilt hammered her.

His hand squeezed hers and she realized he wanted her even closer. And he was trying to get her to take something. She squinted. A bracelet? Automatically, she wrapped her fingers around it. "Keep . . . it . . . safe . . .," he rasped.

"Who does it belong to? Who do you want me to give it to?"

"Miranda . . . tell Miranda . . . love her . . . didn't know."

Honorably discharged from the Army after an explosion nearly killed her, former military psychiatrist Brooke Adams has set up shop to help others—but her days of helping military personnel are over. She’s got her own battles to fight from her time overseas, and she’s not equipped to take on more. Former Army Special Ops Sergeant First Class Asher James could handle anything that war sent his way—terrorists, bombs, bullets. The only thing that scares him now is sleep. As the shadows close in, the nightmares begin.

Finally convinced that he needs help, Asher makes an appointment with a counselor, and Brooke is pressed by her boss to take him on. When he arrives at her office she isn’t there—but a dead body is. Brooke is devastated when she walks in, and Asher is a conveniently strong shoulder to cry on. But she can’t take him on as a client after sharing such an intimate and unprofessional moment, can she? And he’s not sure he can handle sharing his deepest fears with such a beautiful woman.

When it becomes clear that Brooke was the real target of the attack—and that her secrets go even deeper than his own—Asher vows to protect her no matter what.

He couldn't shake it. The way the sun had bronzed her face. The shape of her lips. The blonde hair, the curve of her body, lean and strong and—

He was seeing ghosts.

More, the woman looked completely rattled. So, even if it wasn't—well, he'd probably completely freaked her out about her upcoming climb.

Oh, he was pitiful with his lies.

He took a breath, glanced at Ham, who was finishing off his ribs, and walked over to her.

"Sorry about that."

She turned, and if he thought she might be freaked out before, the blood virtually drained from her face. Her mouth opened.

She was pretty, in a fierce, no-games kind of way. No makeup, her blonde hair long and wavy, in runnels of gold and white.

He could see her eyes through her glasses, and they widened.

The name just spilled out, a whisper of crazy, irrational, forbidden hope. "Jacie?"

For a second, time stopped. She seemed to hold her breath, frozen. Just like that last night he'd seen her, the sky spilling stars across the mountainscape, falling into her eyes. The sweet smell of her skin swept over him and he could nearly feel the whisper of her lips against his neck.

The urge to kiss her today might be even more powerful than it had been three years ago. "Jacie, where—"

"I'm sorry. I think you have me confused with someone else."

Frantz's Award-Winning Novels Have Sold More Than 200,000 Copies

- "Laura Frantz is a gifted writer."—Julie Klassen, bestselling author
- Author is an ECPA bestseller and a 2018 Christy Award winner
- "Frantz's latest historical romance creates a wonderfully vivid sense of place and a community of compelling characters seemingly with natural ease."—Booklist on A Bound Heart

Unflinching and plainspoken, Tessa Swan is not your typical 18th-century woman. Born and bred on the western Virginia frontier along with her five brothers, she is a force to be reckoned with.

Quiet and courageous, Clay Tygart is not your typical 18th-century man. Raised by Lenape Indians, he returns a hero from the French and Indian War to the fort that bears his name, bringing with him Tessa's long-lost friend, Keturah, a redeemed Indian captive like himself.

Determined to avoid any romantic entanglements as fort commander, Clay remains aloof whenever he encounters the lovely Tessa. But when she is taken captive by the tribe Clay left, his hand—and heart—are forced, leading to one very private and one very public reckoning.

Intense, evocative, and laced with intricate historical details that bring the past to life, An Uncommon Woman will transport you to the picturesque and dangerous western Virginia mountains of 1770.

EXCERPT

Growing up is hard on a man. If he'd done well for himself, coming home again should be one of his finest days. The kind of a day that kept him buoyed up with hopeful visions to survive his lowest moments: A mother peering out the kitchen window, eager for the first sign of her returning son. A sweet aromatic cinnamon cake baking in the oven. A loyal dog, muzzle now gray, sitting by the mailbox.

Unfortunately for Jimmy Fisher, he hadn't done terribly well for himself since he'd left Stoney Ridge. Years ago he left home to chase some big dreams, but those had fizzled out like smoke up a chimney. As for a mother waiting anxiously for her son's return—Edith Fisher Lapp wasn't the type to hover or to wait. And she never did let Jimmy have a dog.

Jimmy stopped at the bottom step of the Bent N' Dent store, stalling. He recognized the beat-up buggy in the parking lot as belonging to Hank Lapp. That meant that Hank would be inside and, to be honest, he was not the first person Jimmy wanted to see upon returning to town. Closer to the last. He was still baffled that his mother had married Hank. Of all the men on earth, she chose wild-haired, wild-eyed Hank Lapp.

Jimmy pivoted on his heels, wondering if he should just turn tail and flee. If he had a dollar to spare in his pocket, he would do just that. Sadly, he didn't. And he was hungry, too. He hadn't eaten since yesterday morning, when he came across an orchard filled with withered, wormy apples. He rubbed his stomach, still regretting that indulgence.

Fisher's Books Have Sold More Than 1 Million Copies

- "Fisher gently unpacks the challenge that making peace with others (and God) brings after a fall from grace." —Publishers Weekly on Mending Fences
- "There's just something unique and fresh about every Suzanne Woods Fisher book." —Shelley Shepard Gray, New York Times and USA Today bestselling author
- Natural-born charmer Jimmy Fisher is back, looking for work and hoping for love

Back and broke in Stoney Ridge, Jimmy Fisher has coasted as long as he could through life on charm, good looks, and deep-set dimples. They always worked just fine for him—until they didn't. His smile has no effect on the violet-eyed beauty he met at the Bent N' Dent, the one with that stunning horse. She's offered him a job, but nothing else.

The last thing Sylvie Schrock King needs around Rising Star Farm is a grown boy working for her, especially her neighbor Edith's son. The woman holds a serious grudge against Sylvie and her son, and hiring Jimmy Fisher will only fan the flames of Edith's rancor. But Sylvie is desperate for help on the farm, and Jimmy understands horses like no one else.

While Jimmy's lazy smile and teasing ways steal Sylvie's heart, Edith is working on a way to claim her land. Has Sylvie made another terrible mistake? Or is it too late to outfox the fox? More importantly . . . just who is the fox?

Writing with both wit and warmth, Fisher delivers a supremely satisfying conclusion to the popular DEACON'S FAMILY series.

Ten years after her parents were killed, Evelyn Radcliffe is once more homeless. The orphanage that was her refuge and later her workplace has burned to the ground, and only she and a young orphan girl have escaped. Convinced this must be related to her parents' murders, Evelyn flees with the girl to Mesquite Springs in the Texas Hill Country and finds refuge in the home of Wyatt Clark, a talented horse rancher whose plans don't include a family of his own.

At first, Evelyn is a distraction. But when it becomes clear that trouble has followed her to Mesquite Springs, she becomes a full-blown disruption. Can Wyatt keep her safe from the man who wants her dead? And will his own plans become collateral damage?

Suspenseful and sweetly romantic, Out of the Embers is the first in a new series that invites you to the Texas Hill Country in the 1850s, when the West was wild, the men were noble, and the women were strong.

EXCERPT

Don't fall! Don't fall! Don't fall!

Holly concentrated on putting one foot in front of the other as she traversed the boat's wooden planks.

Walking on firm surfaces posed few problems, but a slightly undulating platform?

Dacey.

Despite all the falls she'd taken in her life, for some reason doing a faceplant with Steven Roark watching would be the ultimate humiliation.

And the man was definitely watching her. That intent gaze of his was drilling a hole in her back.

Just a few more feet, Holly, and you'll be on terra firma. You can make it.

She focused on her destination, exhaling in relief as the soles of her shoes made contact with the concrete sidewalk.

Picking up her pace, she furrowed her brow at a sudden urge to glance over her shoulder for one last glimpse of the charter fisherman.

What was that all about? Why would she want to see Steven Roark again?

It wasn't as if he'd gone out of his way to be charming, after all. Yeah, he had decent manners—but he'd gotten downright argumentative during their brief exchange. And he couldn't have hustled her off his boat any faster.

No wonder she was flustered—and unsettled.

On top of all that, Steven Roark was nothing like she'd expected. There wasn't a lick of similarity between the taciturn man and his amicable six-year-old nephew. Nor did he resemble—in appearance or manner—the boy's sandy-haired, low-key father.

Yet the temptation to look over her shoulder remained.

Brusque dismissal aside, the man exuded magnetism—and no one with his commanding presence had ever entered her orbit. Certainly none with a tall, toned physique, strong jaw, wind-mussed brown hair, and piercing chestnut-colored eyes.

As another powerful temptation to turn around swept over her, she huffed out a breath.

Enough.

She'd gone to his boat to make a pitch for a donation. Period. The next step—if there was one—was his.
