- “Plenty of international action and intrigue in this heist thriller.” —Booklist on The Gryphon Heist
- Bestselling and award-winning author is a former stealth pilot
- “An ambitious, beautifully realized thriller cut from the cloth of James Rollins and Steve Berry.” —BookTrib on The Gryphon Heist

After a rough mission in Rome involving the discovery of a devastating bioweapon, Company spy Ben Calix returns to Paris to find his perfectly ordered world has collapsed. A sniper attack. An ambush. A call for help that brings French SWAT forces down on his head. Ben is out. This is a severance—reserved for incompetents and traitors.

Searching for answers and anticipating a coming attack, Ben and a woman swept up in his misfortunes must travel across Europe to find the sniper who tried to kill him, the medic who saved his life, the schoolmaster who trained him, and an upstart hacker from his former team. More than that, Ben must come to grips with his own insignificance as the Company's plan to stop Leviathan from unleashing the bioweapon at any cost moves forward without him—and he struggles against the infection that is swiftly claiming territory within his own body.

Award-winning author James R. Hannibal ratchets up the tension on every page of this suspenseful new thriller.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

James R. Hannibal is no stranger to secrets and adventure. This former stealth pilot from Houston, Texas, has been shot at, locked up with surface-to-air missiles, and chased down a winding German road by an armed terrorist. He is a two-time Silver Falchion Award winner for his children's mysteries, a former Thriller Award nominee, and a 2020 Selah and Carol Award finalist for The Gryphon Heist—the opener for the CIA series that now includes Chasing the White Lion. James is a rare multisense synesthete, meaning all of his senses intersect. He sees and feels sounds and smells, and hears flashes of light. If he tells you the chocolate cake you offered smells blue and sticky, take it as a compliment.

EXCERPT

Short-haired and stocky, her sleeves perpetually rolled up, Peg took charge. "Cooper, honey," she said, "go call Artie on the kitchen phone. His number is tacked on an index card right next to the phone. I saw the Lightship down at the dock. He's gotta be somewhere around here."

"Artie?" Blaine said. My Artie?

Dad was sitting on the sidewalk, checking his father's pulse. "Artie's the doctor for outlying islands."

Artie... was what? He'd never told her, but then again, they didn't talk. Not anymore. Two years ago, Blaine and Artie had parted on a sour note. His sour note, not hers. Artie Lotosky had been her longtime friend, her very best buddy, and she had invited him to join her in Europe. Since he was a struggling medical student, she'd even offered to buy his plane ticket, which she thought was a very generous offer, especially because she would've added it to her considerable credit card debt. Artie turned her down flat. He wasn't at all grateful for her invitation. He should've been, she thought, but he just wasn't. He even implied she was irresponsible. A few months later, she had called him on his birthday and he never bothered to return her call. That stung.

Peg pointed up the road. "Cooper, there he is now." Blaine spun around to see her nephew dash up the street to greet a man coming out of a store—hold on! That man was Artie.

She'd had no warning. Her mind was completely focused on the crisis at hand, and the next moment, heart attack! Here came Artie Lotosky, striding confidently down Main Street, one hand grasping a medical black bag.

Blaine stared. He'd lost weight. A lot of it. He used to be kind of chubby. No longer. And he sported a beard. Even his clothes were an upgrade. Gone was the faded sweatshirt with the stretched-out neck, replaced by a smart button-down. Gone were the worn sneakers, replaced by trendy L.L. Bean boots. Gone was his scruffy, unkempt appearance. He looked like a completely different person. Rakish. Stylish.

Goosebumps broke out on her arms. Man, he looked good.

Blaine Grayson returns to Three Sisters Island with a grand plan—to take Camp Kicking Moose to the next level. Her dream starts to unravel when she discovers Moose Manor's kitchen has been badly remodeled by her sister, Cam, who doesn't know how to cook. Added to that blow is the cold shoulder given by her best friend, Artie Lotosky, now a doctor to the unbridged Maine islands.

As old wounds are opened, Blaine starts to wonder if she made a mistake by coming home. Little by little, she must let go of one dream to discover a new one, opening her heart to a purpose and a future she had never imagined.

Bestselling author Suzanne Woods Fisher invites you back to the coast of Maine for a story that reminds you to release what doesn't matter and cling to what does: faith, family, and friendships.

Can They Stop a Deadly Bioattack Before It's Too Late?

- Koslin is the winner of three Royal Palm Literary awards
- Koslin writes fast-paced suspense with high action, drawing on her experience as a fourth-degree black belt
- A former female sniper saves a man's life, only to be drawn into his mission to stop the spread of a lethal virus

Former CIA sniper Kadance Tolle possesses a special set of skills and a rare pedigree. She comes from a family of assassins, and by saving Lyndon Vaile's life she risks being found by them. Despite the danger, Kadance feels compelled to help Lyndon discover who is after him—and his research that seems to prove that the Ebola virus was manmade and is about to be weaponized.

With shadowy figures pursuing them and a Mastermind watching their every move, Kadance and Lyndon must scramble to stop an impending bioattack at the State of the Union address. But their warnings fall on deaf ears, and it becomes increasingly clear that there's no one they can trust—except perhaps each other.

Strap in for a breakneck story that will have you up all night, hurtling toward the last page as the clock ticks and time runs out.

Moving Historical Romance from Fan Favorite Rachel Fordham

- “Fordham’s wholesome tale will hit all the right notes for fans of Christian historical novels.”—Publishers Weekly starred review on Yours Truly, Thomas
- Will appeal to readers of Janette Oke and Lauraine Snelling
- “Fordham beautifully [illustrates] the power in simple acts of kindness to foster healing, hope, and happiness.”—Booklist on The Hope of Azure Springs

Five years in a New York state reformatory have left a blemish on Hazel’s real name. So when she takes a job as Doctor Gilbert Watts’s lady in attendance in 1898, she does so under an alias. In the presence of her quiet and pious employer, Hazel finds more than an income. She finds a friend and a hope that if she can set her tarnished past in order, she might have a future after all.

As Gilbert becomes accustomed to the pleasant chatter of his new dental assistant, he can’t help but sense something secretive about her. Perhaps there is more to this woman than meets the eye. Can the questions that loom between them ever be answered? Or will the deeds of days gone by forever rob the future of its possibilities?

Rachel Fordham pens a tender tale of a soft-spoken man, a hardened woman, and the friends that stand by them as they work toward a common purpose—to expunge the record of someone society deemed beyond saving—and perhaps find love along the way.

EXCERPT

Marian closed the car door and started toward the imposing porch entrance that was reminiscent of a gatehouse found on a castle, albeit slightly smaller in size. She fumbled with the ampulla and tightened her grip on it. She couldn't let anything happen to the relic until she figured out why Dad had it.

She brought the opening to her nose and sniffed again as she had earlier. What if the rumors were true, and it had held liquid of some kind? And what if he'd consumed it?

She touched her tongue to the inner neck and licked it. A strange rush, like a gust of wind, charged through her veins down her body into her arms and legs. The gust was oddly warm in the chill of the evening. As the grit dissolved against her tongue, she heard a pounding gallop of horse hooves on the driveway behind her.

Swiveling, she was shocked to find an enormous horse bearing down on her, its rider apparently not paying any attention to the Bentley in its path. She stepped backward, groping for the Bentley door handle. But her fingers only grasped air.

A glance out of her periphery told her the car was gone—that Bojing had already driven it away. How had the slight man assisted Harrison into his wheelchair and moved the vehicle so rapidly?

The thunder of hooves drew nearer, kicking up stones and dust with every step. And yet, wasn't Harrison's driveway paved?

She stepped back further, out of the way, expecting to trip into the well-manicured tulip garden at the front of Chesterfield Park. But uneven grass tickled her ankles. The stallion passed by, leaving a breeze in its wake that wafted across her cheeks and bare arms and brought the odor of horseflesh with a mixture of hay, mud, and sweat.

The ultimate cure that could heal any disease? Crazy. That's exactly what research scientist Marian Creighton has always believed about her father's obsession, even if it does come from a desire to save her sister Ellen from the genetic disease that stole their mother from them. But when her father falls into a coma after drinking a vial of holy water believed to contain traces of residue from the Tree of Life in the Garden of Eden, all of Marian's assumptions must be questioned. He's left behind tantalizing clues that suggest he's crossed back in time. Insane. Until Marian tests his theories herself and experiences strange visions of medieval times.

With the help of one of her father's colleagues, Marian discovers that she is not the only one interested in his research. Stalking, break-ins, and a kidnapping convince her that she must take the plunge and follow her father back to the 1380s or risk losing him—and her sister—forever.

Bestselling author Jody Hedlund is your guide down the twisting river of time to a volatile era of superstition, peasant revolts, and chivalry in this suspenseful story.

Kentucky packhorse librarian Tansy Calhoun doesn't mind the rough trails and long hours as she serves her Appalachian mountain community during the Great Depression. Yet she longs to find love like the heroines in her books. When a charming writer comes to town, she thinks she might have found it—or is the perfect man actually closer than she thinks?

Perdita Sweet has called these mountains home for so long she's nearly as rocky as the soil around her small cabin. Long ago she thought she could love, but when the object of her affection up and married someone else, she stopped giving too much of herself away to others.

As is so often the case, it's easier to see what's best for others than to see what's best for oneself, and Perdita knows who Tansy should choose. But why would anyone listen to the romantic advice of an old spinster?

Saddle up for a heartfelt story of love—love of family, love of place, and the love of a lifetime—from bestselling author Ann H. Gabhart.

- “This stirring tale will appeal to fans of Jody Hedlund.”—Publishers Weekly on All Manner of Things
- Susie’s novel All Manner of Things was named a 2020 Michigan Notable Book
- This stunning time-slip novel will be a favorite with readers and book clubs

In 1975, three thousand children were airlifted out of Saigon to be adopted into Western homes. When Mindy, one of those children, announces her plans to return to Vietnam to find her birth mother, her loving adopted family is suddenly thrown back to the events surrounding her unconventional arrival in their lives.

Though her father supports Mindy’s desire to meet her family of origin, he struggles privately with an unsettling fear that he’ll lose the daughter he’s poured his heart into. Mindy’s mother undergoes the emotional rollercoaster inherent in the adoption of a child from a war-torn country, discovering the joy hidden amid the difficulties. And Mindy’s sister helps her sort through relics that whisper of the effect the trauma of war has had on their family—but also speak of the beauty of overcoming.

Told through three strong voices in three compelling timelines, The Nature of Small Birds is a hopeful story that explores the meaning of family far beyond genetic code.

When Paul Elias receives a terminal diagnosis, he leaves his physician’s office in a fog. Only one thing is clear to him: if he is going to die, he must find someone to watch over his granddaughter, Pearl, who has been in his charge since her drug-addicted father disappeared. Paul decides to take her back to Nysa—both the place where he grew up and the place where he lost his beloved wife under strange circumstances forty years earlier.

But when he picks up Pearl from school, the little girl already seems to know of his plans, claiming a woman told her.

In Nysa, Paul reconnects with an old friend but is not prepared for the onslaught of memory. And when Pearl starts vanishing at night and returning with increasingly bizarre tales, Paul begins to question her sanity, his own views on death, and the nature of reality itself.

In this suspenseful and introspective story from award-winning author Shawn Smucker, the past and the present mingle like opposing breezes, teasing out the truth about life, death, and sacrifice.

"No one seems to know where the teen is," the man said. "The neighbor had the kid's number. I've called it, but it went straight to voicemail." He handed Caden a piece of paper with the number on it.

"Thanks." He texted the number to Daria and asked her to find the phone. He looked at Zane. "We're going to need to set up a task force."

"I was thinking the same thing." His partner coughed and pulled a pack of tissues from his pocket. "Be right back."

Caden let his gaze scan the room, ignoring the chatter of the other officers coming from the open front door. He stopped at the mantel. Pictures lined it. Mostly of the children. Some of the family. And one of another family he'd seen somewhere. Zane returned with a bottle of water. "Sorry. Had to find some Motrin and blow my nose. Seriously, how can your nose feel stuffed completely full and when you blow it, noth—"

"I don't need the details, dude." Zane still held the tablet in his other hand. Caden nodded to it. "Let me see those pictures from the first crime scene again will you?"

Zane pulled them up. "Why?" He popped a cough drop.

"Scroll through them. I'm looking for something in particular."

His partner swiped one picture after another.

"There," Caden said. "Stop."

"What do you see?"

"The same picture on that end table in the Bailey's home that's over there on the mantle."

Ava Jackson entered the military shortly after high school, but her mother's illness has forced her to request an early discharge. She already lost her father while deployed, and there's no way she's going to let her mother die alone. But after a visit to the nursing facility where her mother lives, Ava is attacked walking back to her car. Fortunately, FBI Special Agent Caden Denning arrives in time to help fight off her attacker.

Caden reveals to Ava that she may hold the key to the murders of three families, and he needs her help before anyone else is harmed. The hits show a pattern, and clearly the killer has an agenda. But if Caden and Ava can't discover what it is, Ava may be next on the hit list.

Bestselling author Lynette Eason concludes her latest suspense-filled series with a bang as secrets are revealed and the guilty are brought to justice.

EXCERPT

"There has to be another way." But even as she said it, she knew it wasn't true.

"Your mom and I have talked about it. I want to spend every moment I can with her. I've decided to sell." His mouth twisted on the words, his façade beginning to crack, and she could do nothing but throw her arms around her dad and hold him tightly.

"I'm so sorry," she whispered into his shoulder. He didn't need her grief too. He needed her to be strong and sure.

She'd heard fishermen talk of ships in distress looking for any port in the storm. But her mom and dad didn't need just any port. They needed to be able to lean on her in the face of the unknown. She couldn't buckle under her own grief. She wouldn't.

With a gentle pat on her back and a sniff just above her head, her dad pulled away. His long legs carried him back a step just as the glow of the morning sun lit up the ocean where it met the east, turning the water from black to inky blue. "I have to tell you something else." His furry black eyebrows sank together, meeting over his crooked nose.

Her stomach sank. There was no way this was good news. But what else could he possibly add?

"I'm going to sell to Oliver Ross."

Was there another Oliver Ross on the island she didn't know? Maybe this one was from away. From far far away. Maybe he wasn't the boy she'd gone to school with or the one she'd actively been avoiding for more than a decade. And it did require some concentrated effort not to run into him in tiny Victoria by the Sea.

It was worth it for her sanity.

But when her dad motioned in the direction of the truck, she knew. She knew with utter certainty that he was selling his business to her arch nemesis.

Johnson's Novels Have Sold More Than Half a Million Copies

- Liz Johnson is a New York Times bestselling author and Carol Award finalist
- This series returns to her fans' favorite location, Prince Edward Island
- "Both an exciting treasure hunt and penetrating exploration of overcoming past mistakes, Johnson's excellent novel will captivate readers." —Publishers Weekly starred review on A Glitter of Gold

When Meg Whitaker's father decides to sell the family's lobster-fishing business to her high school nemesis, she sets out to prove she should inherit it instead. Though she's never had any interest in running the small fleet—or even getting on a boat due to her persistent seasickness—she can't stand to see Oliver Ross take over. Not when he ruined her dreams for a science scholarship and an Ivy League education ten years ago.

Oliver isn't proud of what he did back then. Angry and broken by his father walking out on his family, he lashed out at Meg—an innocent bystander. But owning a respected fishing fleet on Prince Edward Island is the opportunity of a lifetime, and he's not about to walk away just because Meg wants him to.

Meg's father has the perfect solution: Oliver and Meg must work the business together, and at the end of the season, he'll decide who gets it. Along the way, they may discover that their stories are more similar than they thought . . . and their dreams aren't what they expected.

Bestselling author Liz Johnson invites you back to Prince Edward Island for a brand-new series about family, forgiveness, and the kind of love that heals all wounds.

Restless with the familiarity of her Alabama home, Ellie Fields accepts a teaching job in a tiny Louisiana town deep in bayou country. Though rightfully suspicious of outsiders, who have threatened both their language and their culture, most of the people in tiny Bernadette, Louisiana, come to appreciate the young and idealistic schoolteacher as a boon to the town. She's soon teaching just about everyone—and coming up against opposition from both the school board and a politician with ulterior motives.

Acclimating to a whole new world, Ellie meets a lonely but intriguing Cajun fisherman named Raphe who introduces her to the legendary white alligator that haunts these waters. Raphe and Ellie have barely found their way to each other when a huge bounty is offered for the elusive gator, bringing about a shocking turn of events that will test their love and their will to right a terrible wrong.

A master of the Southern novel, Valerie Fraser Luesse invites you to enter the sultry swamps of Louisiana in a story that illuminates the struggle for the heart and soul of the bayou.
