1. Who should read What a Son Needs From His Mom?
2. Your book focuses particularly on mothers of sons. Why is there a need for a book specifically for these moms?
3. What's it like to raise a boy and why is having a daughter less confusing for a mother?
4. What is your experience as a mom? Is there a personal connection you have to the subject of your book?
5. Most mothers have a great amount of devotion toward their children, yet many women admit raising sons has its challenges. What is one of those challenges?
6. Although this is something we instinctively know, studies now prove that boys need moms in order to grow into healthy men. What does the love and nurture of a mom do for her son?
7. Cheri, you talk in What a Son Needs From His Mom about "focusing on the donut instead of the hole." What does this mean in practical life and how is it helpful to boys?
8. Sometimes mothers try to build their son up and yet their exuberant praise backfires. What's going on and what is a better way to encourage boys?
9. How can moms raise confident, competent sons? What is one of the keys?
10. You have a chapter about developing your son's character. Why is this important to the life of a growing boy?
11. There is a theme in What a Son Needs From His Mom about knowing when to let go. Why is the letting go process often a struggle for mothers?
12. What are some ways mothers can prepare for their sons' leaving home—and why is this important?
